

HENRY ESTATE WINERY

UMPQUA, OREGON USA

History

In 1972, Calvin Scott Henry III returned to family land, owned for 90 years in the heart of Oregon. After 13 years in California's aerospace industry, the time was right for Henry and his family to pursue a life of making wine. A close friend, Gino Zepponi, persuaded Henry to take a closer look at the family ranch in the Umpqua Valley as a good location to grow premium wine grapes. After much due-diligence, the pioneer spirit prevailed and the Henry's were on their way to establishing one of the renowned wineries in the southwest region of Oregon.

The entire family helped plant the original 12 acres consisting of pinot noir, chardonnay and gewürztraminer. Since the original planting in 1972, an additional 33 acres have been added, including white riesling, müller thurgau, pinot gris, merlot and cabernet sauvignon. It was obvious that the locale in the warmer, versatile climate, combined with a multitude of soil geographies, produced the most diversified grape growing region in Oregon.

The winery was constructed in 1978, just in time for crush. Henry hired his friend Zepponi as a winemaking consultant. Before his passing, Zepponi assisted in making the winery the success that it is today. In 2000, the winery expanded its production from 6,000 to 18,000 cases to meet the growing public demand for the wines of Henry Estate. The new millennium finds our wines in over 25 states and five countries in Europe and Asia.

Always striving for perfection, Henry developed a unique trellising system that optimizes the maturity of grapes for production of world-class wines. The Scott Henry Vertical Trellis System is used exclusively in our vineyards and is used throughout the world's finest wine growing regions including; Australia, New Zealand, South America and North America.

The entire Henry family is dedicated to maintain and grow Henry Estate as one of Oregon's oldest and most prestigious producers of fine wine. The pioneering spirit of Henry has been an inspiration to many newcomers in the Oregon wine business. That inspiration and spirit is a foundation for the entire Oregon wine industry, and will continue to build the legacy and character of Scott Henry III.
